Where Is That Dastardly Flying Creep?

Posted by Edwin on January 12th, 2012

Thin blood is said to taste as sweet as the flower nectar for the buzzing bees.
 Bloody mosquito intrudes into still air impossible to break the silence with buzz.
 The sting, not as lethal as the bee's tho', pierce thru' softly without one's feel.
 High fluidity, rich with hemoglobin, was drained away like never before.
 An eye for an eye, a bite for a smack.
Where is that dastardly flying creep?

 Yet, one continue to journey as if he walks on bridge above still water.
